

For week-6 I used the WebDisplays mod in Minecraft and created a custom Salesforce object. The WebDisplays mod was cool, I had to look up a YouTube video to figure out how to get it to work but after that it seemed pretty functional and I'm impressed that someone figured out how to integrate the internet into Minecraft like that. Salesforce was about the same as the last time we used it. I sort of get it but not totally, I feel like there's something with it that hasn't totally clicked yet for me. I used a spreadsheet I already had from my high school team's summer running mileage competition and I imported that into Salesforce as an object. It sort of imported but there was some incorrect data. I think with some tinkering it could be pretty functional and useful.
